Miriam Cahn

This first exhibition in collaboration with OSMOS in New York will be devoted to the artist Miriam Cahn (b.1949, Basel, Switzerland). Primarily known for her paintings and drawings, her practice also includes sculptures, videos, photographs and writings. This year, Cahn received two of the most important European artist awards: the Oskar Kokoschka Prize, awarded by the Austrian federal government, and the Goslar Kaiserring, awarded by the city of Goslar. With her political works, Cahn reveals a feminist and deeply humanistic view of the world. This first show at OSMOS will offer a look into a less-explored facet of Cahn's work, namely the theme of reproducibility, notably through her digital slideshows, photographs and engravings from the 1980s to the present day. Cahn creates digital slideshows of photographs taken with an iPad. These show successive states of paintings, as well as sculptures modelled in plasticine, which sometimes exist only digitally through these slideshows. Parts of bodies in the process of modelling (hands, heads, torsos) appear, the artist's hands are sometimes visible, juxtaposed with roughly modelled anatomical fragments. Cahn began working with silver photography and Super 8 films in the 1980s. These images accompany her performances, not only in her studio but also in urban spaces. The exhibition opens up a new perspective on Cahn's work and will make her historical works accessible to the American public for the first time.

The opening of this exhibition will take place on 16 May 2024, at 50 East 1st Street, New York, 6 pm.

OSMOS

OSMOS was initiated in 1997 as a project space in Berlin, and has since developed into a fully integrated concept for curatorial and editorial activities.

It currently has two locations. In New York City, where also the collaborative project by Jocelyn Wolff and Meyer Riegger will find its place, OSMOS Address is located at 50 East 1st. Street in a Manhattan East Village storefront that was once a saloon frequented by Emma Goldman and other radicals. In Stamford, New York OSMOS Station is located at 20 Railroad Ave in the Catskills.

OSMOS is composed of multiple operational components, with the key three being: OSMOS Address (Project space and operational headquarters); OSMOS Publishing (Quarterly Print Magazine and Artists Monographs); and managing artist's estates.
